CVW is a new authentication procedure established by credit card companies to reduce fraud for Internet transactions. It requires a cardholder to enter the CVW number in at transaction time to verify that the card is on hand. The CVW code is a security feature for "card not present" transactions (e.g., Internet transactions), and now appears on most (but not all) major credit and debit cards. This new feature is a three-digit code that provides a cryptographic check of the information embossed on the card. Therefore, the CVW code is not part of the card number itself. The CVW Code is the 3 digit numbeRR that appears on the reverse side of your credit card (where your signature appears). See example:
